MOKENA COUPLE BREAK HITCH- HIKING RECORD

It has remained for two of Mokena's widely and well-known globe trotters to set a new record for quick hitch-hiking trips. Mr. and Mrs. Don C. Hall of Mokena who have been connected with the Texas Centennial at Dallas, left that city on December 10 and in a little over 36 hours were in Mokena, hitch-hiking rides all the way. They were fortunate enough to meet some transcontinental travelers who were glad to give them a "lift" on their way to Mokena. It is doubtful if there is any other case on record where a hitch-hiking trip was any quicker than this one.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hall were connected with the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago during 1933 and 1934 and as soon as the Texas fair was ready they were given assignments on a number of features. The main event which brought the Hall's to the attention of many thousands of people and to exposition officials was when Mr. Hall was Mayor of "Gold Gulch" a typical day of '49 exhibit the first year of the Chicago fair.

In spite of the advancing years, Mr. and Mrs. Hall are very spry and their vitality and ambition is really wonderful.

Even now Mr. Hall has offers to take part in features of the San Francisco fair and of the New York fair for 1939.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall will remain for the present in their home in Mokena for the holiday season.

They are much interested in the old age pension act and have their claim on file with the Will County officials.

Silent Night, Holy Night!

Silent night! Holy night!

All is dark, save the light

Yonder, where they sweet vigils keep

O'er the Babe who in silent sleep

Rests in heavenly peace,

Rests in heavenly peace,

Silent night! Peaceful night!

Darkness flies, all is light;

Shepherds hear the angels sing,

"Alleluia! hail the King!"

Christ the Savior is born,

Jesus the Savior is born."

Silent night! Holiest night!

Wondrous Star, lend thy light!

With the angels let us sing

Alleluia to our King!

Christ the Savior is born!

Jesus the Savior is born!

THE RATS LEAVE THE BIG BARN

BILLY MINK'S second visit to the big barn had been an occasion of great pleasure to Billy and terror to all the rats who lived there. He had hunted them just for the pleasure of hearing their squeals of fright and the scampering of their feet as they raced this way and that way seeking safety. With his wonderful nose he had followed them to their most secret hiding places. Three he had caught and he could have caught more had he really wanted to.

When he had become tired of the hunt Billy had curled up for a nap in a corner of the haymow where it was dark and quiet. He had done this instead of going back to the woodpile. It was very comfortable there. Besides, it would be very handy to be right there when he felt like hunting again.

It wasn't very long before all the rats knew just where Billy was. One of them had happened to pass near enough to smell Billy, and had at once passed the word along to all the others.

"Now is the time," said the wise old leader, "for us to get together and attack him. Who will join with me?"

Not a single rat came forward. The gray old leader shook his head sadly. "You are cowards, every one of you," said he. "If you will not fight there is just one thing left for us to do."

"What is that?" squeaked one of the young rats who had been loudest in his boasting before Billy Mink had appeared the second time.

"We've got to leave this barn," replied the gray old leader. "If we remain here it will be to die. That mink will stay here, or if he doesn't he will keep coming back until he has hunted down and killed every rat. We must leave the barn, and do it at once. There is no time to be lost. Probably he is asleep now. By the time he awakes we must be out of this barn. The rat who doesn't leave it now never will leave it."

Immediately there was a great discussion. Every rat there knew that the wise old leader was right. But where should they go? It was winter, and they could not live long out of doors. They must go to a place where they would find both shelter and food. They might as well remain to be killed by Billy Mink as to go forth and starve or freeze to death. At least that is what some of them said. Some suggested one thing and some another. Finally they turned to the gray old leader for his advice. They had followed him so long that they had learned to trust to his wisdom.

TO BARK a hound enjoys

Just for the sake
Of hearing all the noise
That he can make.

No rabbit is around,
No stranger near,
He merely barks, the hound,
The bark to hear.

I do not blame the pup,
For I know men
Who also whoop it up
Now and again.
They speak no word of worth,
No bright remark:
They only want the earth
To hear them bark.

That hound that always yelps
Men cease to heed,
And shouting never helps
A man succeed.
You'll find, in all life's walks,
Upon the shelf
The man who merely talks
To hear himself.

THE LANGUAGE
OF YOUR HANDBy Leicester K. Davis

YOU have now learned that the thumb has a very real significance to those who become masters of the mysteries of the hand. As in dealing with other elements which in final combination are an accurate index of the inner self, each element of the thumb should be thoroughly understood.

Temperamental Elements of the Thumb.

The thumb, telling as it does, the unvarnished truth about many an inherited and acquired trait which so strongly characterizes you as "you" and me as "me," is remarkable in its revelations. As you progress with study of the thumb, you will learn how well the Ruler of Our Destinies has given compensations for what would otherwise be serious deficiencies in temperament. Such compensating elements are found throughout the hand, but nowhere so clearly indicated as in the thumb.

The illustration charts for you the position of temperamental indications of the thumb. Fix these in mind. Base your analysis of the thumb upon: (1) Its length, (2) its position on the hand, (3) the respective lengths and contours of the first, or nail joint, the second, or middle joint, the third, or palm joint, and (4), the amount of flexibility or rigidity throughout the entire thumb.

only one sweetheart. The same applies to women. However, there are so many exceptions to this that a rule would be silly. Some people who never had but one sweetheart before marriage awaken to the fact that they had little knowledge of different people when single, and start taking interest in others after marriage. This is very unfortunate. I would prefer for my son to marry a girl who had had dates with other boys besides him, and I would prefer him to go around with several girls before he picks one for a bride, but he might be just as happy if he didn't.

CHRISTMAS AMONG THE PINES

By
Jocile Webb Pearson

BIG BILL, in spite of his six foot four was a boy at heart. Boss of a logging crew he could be plenty stern when occasion demanded, but a Christmas tree and all the lights and cheer that goes with it was his weakness.

"Christmas is no fun without kids," was the way he put it. But, it looked like Bill was doomed to disappointment this year.

The crew were lounging around the fire after a hard day's work when Pudgy Sam, the cook, shook the ashes out of his pipe and said: "What's the reason we can't have a Christmas just like home right here? Plenty trees, if we can muster the trimmin's."

"Christmas No Fun Without Kids," the Way He Put It.

Bob, the kid dishwasher, was all enthusiasm. "We've got popcorn. I've strung yards at home for mom. Sam's got a harmonica, and Dave a Jew's harp, an' some of you fellows can sing. And I'll trim the tree."

"The Boss wouldn't think much of a Christmas without kids," put in Dave. "There's the Martins. They got a couple kids; we can ring them in. I was by there t'other day an' heard them talkin' about Santa comin'."

"Boss said Martin looks sort of beat out, too," said another. "Suppose we appoint Bob, here as a committee of one to extend our invitation for them to join us. I feel we owe them something, the way they helped us when some of the men had flu."

Big Bill was jubilant with their plans. "You fellows took the wind out of my sails, but you'll do a better job than I could."

"Oh Little Town of Bethlehem," lead by Sam's harmonica, floated out from lusty throats upon another star-strewn night.

Big Bill in a scrambled suit of red flannel and a hemp beard was a satisfactory Santa Claus to at least two happy children. He handed out gifts to everyone. Sam had done his best on the feast that followed, and everybody joined in the "three cheers and a tiger" for a jolly Christmas among the Oregon pines.

A House Built Christmas Day

... by ...
Frances Grinstead

A HOME that was built on a Christmas day stood for a long time on the old Santa Fe trail where it passed near Arrow Rock, Mo., on the Missouri river. Though not quite completed in a single day, with the help of his neighbors on that "holiday" about a hundred years ago, Henry Nave got his cabin ready for his family and the day after Christmas took them into his shelter.

Of course the house was built of undressed lumber, felled right on his farm. When he had selected the location this pioneer cut down round poles for the walls, rafters and joists—the framework.

Mr. Nave had found some large, flat stones, and in the afternoon they dragged these into place for the hearth. Then of other suitable rocks, by much puffing and pulling they built a fireplace—one of those great practical ones which served to heat the home and to cook venison, buffalo meat, corn pone and other "victuals." The exterior of this fireplace was wood, the stones providing a fireproof lining.

The mortar to bind the stones was chiefly mud; to obtain even this simple ingredient it was necessary to build a fire in the middle of the half-constructed cabin and thaw the ground.

But, writes this hardy woodsman, "It was not many days until we were living snugly in our cabin and in good health and with fine appetites."

Holidays among our ancestors were made occasions for such celebrations as this, but they never witnessed the cessation from labor ours afford. There was always need for immediate shelter, crop harvesting, or game killing. Hence log-raising, corn-huskings, and gun-shoots were made social occasions. But do you suppose we ever have more fun than Henry Nave's family and friends had building a house on Christmas day?

THE LADY CANDIDATE

EVER hear of Mrs. Belva Lockwood of New York? She was the woman who was twice a candidate for the presidency of the United States on the Equal Suffrage ticket. That she was defeated on both occasions is beside the point. The record shows that she was perhaps the most stalwart of the early-day advocates of "emancipation" in all its forms for the lover sex. And she accomplished most for them.

In 1832, two years before her likenesses were seen on presidential banners, Mrs. Lockwood obtained the admission of women to the Supreme Court of the United States. It was the culmination of a five-year battle, launched at the Suffrage convention in Lincoln hall, Washington, in 1877.

Mrs. Lockwood was a practicing attorney herself. For three years she had been empowered to appear before the Supreme Court of the District but was barred from the United States body by lack of precedent. She established the precedent. But it required a follow-up campaign of briefs, speeches and bills to obtain the desired end.

The speech of Mrs. Lockwood at the 1877 convention was convincing to her hearers. Contrary to current recollections of the masculine type of woman who first demanded political equality, she is described in a convention report as entirely feminine. As an example: Mrs. Lockwood wore a velvet dress and train.

Mrs. Lockwood was a candidate in 1888 as well as in 1884. She was active in public life almost to the day of her death in 1917, when eighty-seven years old. After women were allowed before the United States Supreme Court she championed the right of Negro lawyers to appear there. Then she shouldered legal cudgels for the Indians, went as a peace commissioner to Europe, engaged in a score of other worthwhile activities.

BALLOTS OF HATE

THE presence this year of a nationally known newspaper publisher on the ticket of a major political party has excited interest in the part newspaper men have taken as candidates in the past.

One of them who was very active was Horace Greeley of New York Tribune fame, a candidate of the "Liberal Republicans" and endorsed by the Democrats to oppose the reelection of Grant in 1872.

Greeley was made a presidential candidate by a reform group of Republicans which had found its nucleus in Missouri with the election of one of its leaders as governor and later held a national convention at Cincinnati.

The Cincinnati convention expected its candidate and platform to be accepted by the Democratic organization, sadly broken up by the disenfranchisement of southerners in the wake of the Civil war. So everyone was amazed when Greeley was named presidential candidate.

During the war, Greeley, a chronic sufferer from nervous disorders, had been erratic in his editorial positions, shifted them frequently—always with the belief that he was expressing what most people wanted.

While the South was still under arms, he had declared with great passion that the war should not end while slavery existed, yet petitioned Lincoln to appoint him commissioner to arrange a peace.

The result of all this was that he was threatened throughout the South and thoroughly hated there. Yet after the war he signed the bail bond of Jefferson Davis.

When the Democrats met at Baltimore a little more than two months after Greeley's nomination they adopted the Greeley ticket because they felt it their only means of opposing Grant.

A small group, it is true, broke away from the main body of Democrats, held a second convention in September at Louisville and placed a third ticket in the field.

Grant didn't fuss around with the election. He won overwhelmingly. It was the first time since the Civil war that all the states voted and Grant carried all but six of them, getting 272 electoral votes. The states Grant didn't win—Missouri, Maryland, Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Texas, were fairly representative of the territory which hated Greeley. But Greeley died before the results were known. These states would have given him 66 votes had he lived.

Explains Lightning

Why certain trees are more apt to be struck by lightning is explained by Dr. W. J. Humphreys in the Kansas City Star. "In general, the trees most likely to be struck are those that have either an extensive root system like the locust, or deep tap-roots like the pine, and this for the very obvious reason that they are the best grounded and therefore, on the whole, offer the least electrical resistance."

Decorating for Christmas—

Some Handsome Window and Room Ornaments That Are Inexpensive

WHILE windows may have been decorated for Christmas before now, the arrangements indoors seldom are made until in-day before the holiday. The freshness of the beauty is wanted without any diminution. If the novelty has worn off, some of the zest of Christmas is lost. This is so true that many homemakers refuse to have windows trimmed more than a day or so prior to Christmas.

If you happen to be among this latter group, let me suggest that you take sprays of a tree that is misshapen and so very cheap and make a splashing bow of red crepe paper for each and hang one in every front window downstairs. Or have one in each downstairs window that is discernible from the street.

You can dot the spray with holly berries, or whatever you have in addition to the green. Or you can dip popped corn in red stain or dye, and touch the kernels with glue and secure them to the sprays. These notes of red, with their irregular shapes, are intriguing, sometimes being mistaken for berries and sometimes for flowerets.

Bank the mantelpiece over the fireplace where the stockings are hung, using sprays of the green intermingled with holly, mistletoe, pine canes, bayberries, or silvered or other metal painted motifs such as acorns, fine twigs with many fronds, etc. When everything is fixed to your fancy twine a string of wee colored Christmas tree electric lights through the greens. These will look ornamental by day and have a glamor when lighted during the evening.

Baskets filled with greens and dotted with the novelty units lend notes of appropriate Christmas decoration. Any small baskets will do for this purpose. There generally are some about a house, but if not, metal paint or green stain some of the little market baskets such as strawberries, brussels sprouts or tomatoes come in. Make a rope or lengths of paper braid for the handles, painted or stained to match the basket. If a length of picture wire has been wound with the strands of paper rope and braid, these handles will keep their shape when ends have been thrust inside the baskets close to their opposite sides. The handles can be wired or glued to the baskets.

TRACTION MEANS GROUND GRIP!

GROUND GRIP MEANS "FIRESTONE"!

TRACTION on unimproved roads in bad weather is a problem which has long baffled tire engineers. Sure footing on a muddy football field is also a problem. But during the wet, slippery football season of 1936, thousands of players depended upon the cleats of their shoes to bring them through for the winning play.

During 1937 thousands of car, truck and bus owners will depend upon the rugged rubber cleats of Firestone Ground Grip Tires to pull them through snow, mud, sand, or over any unimproved roads.

The scientific tread of the Ground Grip Tire is so distinctive in design and so unusual in performance that it has become known as "the tire that makes its own road." It is almost unbelievable how these super-traction tires dig in, grip, and pull you through. They are self-cleaning. Chains are not necessary. Equip the rear wheels of your car, truck or bus with a pair of Ground Grip Tires and save time, money and trouble.

If you have not already equipped your tractor and farm implements with Ground Grip Tires do it now—they will save you 25% in time and fuel costs, reduce vibration, and provide greater comfort.

Call on your nearby Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer, or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today. Start now to reap the many advantages of the Firestone Ground Grip Tire—the greatest traction tire ever built!

LONG-HAULER CRASHES

This long distance trucker of tires and tubes from Akron, Ohio, had passed through four states with his 8-ton cargo when he crashed into a motor car with such force that the pleasure car was demolished and the truck overturned.
The press of the country newspapers and periodicals is lending every support to constructive programs for reducing the highway death rate, bodily injuries and destruction of property.

In the Southwest, 84 civic and trade associations have pledged a united front in demanding better state regulations to govern the operations of trucks on highways.
These important trade groups are centering their attention on the need for sane safety laws and regulations to bring merchandising operations of itinerant trucker-peddlers under state jurisdiction.

PRESENTED MEDALS FOR SAVING HUMAN LIFE

Mary Williams, 926 Hayes Avenue
Oak Park, and H. J. Scheuerman,
339 W. Kenilworth Avenue, Villa
Park, employees of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, were presented medals for the saving of human life last week. Britton
I. Budd, donor of the medals and president of the Public Service Co., made the presentations.

Both recipients earned their recognition for saving victims of lake accidents. Miss Williams, a typist, and the first woman in the utility organization to get the life-saving honor, successfully applied artificial resuscitation methods, as taught to all employees of the company, reviving a young girl. Mr. Scheuerman, a salesman, used his knowledge of artificial respiration to restore breathing to a man who was thought to be dead when removed from the water.

The Britton I. Budd medals, awarded annually since 1927, have been given to forty employees.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

The annual Christmas party of the Woman's Community club was held Wednesday in the home of Mrs. John Braman, with Mrs. Fred Padock assisting hostess.

At one o'clock a bountiful dinner was served with covers laid for 22 members and 11 guests. Mrs. Daniel

Murphy and Mrs. Will Wilson assisted the hostesses on the dinner committee. After the dinner, Mrs. Beulah Reed, newly elected president of the club, opened the meeting with a salute to the flag. A short business session was held and the club voted to donate $5 to the Will County Tuberculosis Sanitarium and $1 to the John Olson Post, American Legion Free Milk Fund of Lockport. Mrs. Reed appointed Mrs. Fred Trask as music chairman for the coming year; Mrs. Harry Parker to have charge of the Current Events and Mrs. Stuart Vanderbilt as program chairman for the next meeting.

The following program was then given: "The Lost Bible", Miss Myra Reed; "Where The 1935 Dollar Went", Mrs. Helen Rowley; "Romance of Spices", Miss Beatrice Heffner of Lockport. "A Visit To St. Nicholas", Mrs. Stuart Vanderbilt. An exchange of Christmas gifts followed the singing of Christmas carols. The next meeting will be held January 13 in the home of Miss Myra Reed with Mrs. Vanderbilt assisting hostess.

Mrs. Bertha Loucks who has been spending several months in Aurora, has returned home for the holidays. While riding a pony, little Ruth Carroll fell and broke her arm, last week.

Mrs. Lena Meyers of Lemont was pleasantly surprised by a group of her relatives and friends in honor of her 75th birthday in the John Brier home, Thursday evening.

Box Car Ballad

By H. G. Huhn

No songs are writ of what I do,
And yet romance is in my frame.
What tales of travel I could brew,
What points of interest I would name,

Could I but tell you what I see
While round the U. S. A.I flee.
'Steem years ago—a well-built pup,
I left the shops one sunny day,
And all the world was looking up,
For was I not upon my way
To take a load out on the steel?
A thrill I'd like to have you feel.

For years I carried high-class freight
Just tons and tons of what men need,
And seldom did I make them wait
Because my given name was "Speed".

I'd often travel night and day,
And did the work for little pay.
Oft went I to the far northwest
In winter cold, with ice and snow
'Twas then I fought to do my best,
It mattered not how winds would blow
Or what the weatherman might do
To make it tough for cars and crew.

To sunny south I next might go
I've even gone across the sea
To tarry there a week or so,
But S. C. S. would follow me
Where 'ere I went, what route I took
And kept my record in a book.

I've carried endless lists of ware
Glass plates for picture, windows bright
Exhibits for the County Fair
And get them there if loaded right
Ten thousand kinds of stuff I've hauled,
Yet just by number am I called.

The time may not be far away,
When in the shops again I'll be,
Then if the man in charge should say
Words which would mean "last load" to me,
E'en if the chances may be scanty,
I hope I'll be a carmen's shanty.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unsympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it. When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tune up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Today's Driving Hint

Comes winter and snow. Long range forecasting not being as far advanced as the weather forecasters would like it to be, we cannot tell how much snow we are going to have, or when we are going to have it. However, we do know that we are going to have it; so it behooves us to be prepared for the road conditions snow creates.

What preparations can we make? Well, if you live in, or do much traveling in a rural area, buy a set of chains for when the snow is deep. Also, it is not a bad idea to have a small shovel for use in digging the car out of drifts or ditches if you happen to skid.

If you live in an urban section

And what little girl wouldn't be happy surrounded by Christmas dolls? Imagine the thrill of being turned loose in a toy shop like this!

where authorities make an attempt, at least, to clear the streets, you won't need a full set of chains (which "burn up" very easily on pavement). One or two of the "snap-on" chain sets which hit the market a few years ago should suffice. Remember this however: chains of any variety will NOT effect miracles. You CANNOT drive over snow covered streets or roads with the ease or safety that you experience on a clean surface, regardless of the chains. The latter will give you traction in starting and some in stopping, but YOU MUST USE CAUTION!

WEAK KIDNEYS

Are you suffering with backaches, headaches, dizziness, nervousness, indigestion, "getting up nights"? These are Nature's warnings that your KIDNEYS are not functioning—not cleansing your blood of poisons as they should. WARNER'S COMPOUND helps weak kidneys and irritated bladder. WILL COUNTY SCHOOL SUPT., ISSUES WARNING

E. F. Booth, Will County Supt. of Schools has sent the following letter of warning to the clerks of the school boards of Will County:

"I hope you will call the attention of the other members of your school board to this letter. The wolves are again rambling all over Will County trying to frighten you people into buying things that are not required at all. When they tell you they are from the State Department or from this office, pay no attention to them whatever because such statements will not be the truth. There is no one in Illinois that can stop your State Money except me, and you know that I am not going to do this except in very rare cases where school boards absolutely refuse to do the reasonable things that the law assumes they will do. If your State Money is ever stopped you will be notified by me and not by any salesman. "It costs enough money to operate our schools without lawfully throwing away the tax payers money by purchasing things that will be of little or no value to schools. "I hope you will consult us before spending your money for any sort of school equipment."

No True American Language
 There is no distinct American language. The language spoken in the United States is English. There are phrases and expressions that are used exclusively in the United States that are called Americanisms, but the language is English. The American Indian tribes spoke many different languages; consequently none of those languages could be called the American language.

Even the Pilgrims Celebrated on Christmas Day

The Pilgrims thought that joy and feasting on a holy day was sinful and frowned on any observance of Christmas, yet on the evening of December 25, 1620, it is recorded that the Puritans returned to their ship and had a feast. The historian was careful to record, that it was to celebrate the start of their new home.

FORD

advances into 1937 with the LOWEST PRICE IN YEARS
and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

The 60-horsepower V-8 engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success.

Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine, available in five body types, is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase—to the same advanced design—with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." And it delivers V-8 smoothness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937.

SCHOOL NEWS

SNOW-BOUND

Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins and their six children lived near Hesipon, Maine. Paul is twenty-two years old and works in the Ford plant in Hesipon. Mary, who is nineteen, works in Sears' store. Harold is eighteen. He helps his father farm and does trapping in the fall. John was fifteen last summer, goes to high school. Eleanor is in eighth grade. Henry is in fifth grade.

Mrs. Jenkins invited her sister, Margaret, her husband and their children for Christmas dinner. The Jenkins children were all home the day before Christmas. They all worked hard. Paul went to town. He bought some groceries and presents for the family. Mary cleaned and stuffed the goose. Harold carried in bedding for the cattle. John caught two muskrats that morning so he had to skin them. Eleanor and Henry did odd jobs. When night came, Henry said, "Papa, can I stay up and wait for Santa Claus?" His papa replied, "No! All of us will go to bed immediately." Henry and Eleanor refused to go to bed. Their mother finally persuaded them to do so.

During the night, Henry dreamed that Santa Clause had brought him a new Elgin bicycle. Eleanor dreamed that Santa Clauses airplane crashed and that he didn't come.

Next morning Henry woke up and called Eleanor. They both went into the parlor and there was a new bicycle for Henry, a fur coat and hat to match for Eleanor.

While Henry and Eleanor looked over what they got from Santa Claus the rest of the family were busily engaged working.

In the meantime Margaret and her husband were busily engaged doing up their work. They started for the Jenkins' place in their new nineteen thirty-seven Ford car.

They arrived at the Jenkins' about an hour before dinner. After greeting each other they ate dinner. Mary and her mother served dinner in cafeteria style.

After eating dinner the men folks went outside and looked at different things.

Margaret's children played games with Henry, John, and Eleanor.

Mrs. Jenkins asked Margaret how her chickens and ducks were. Margaret replied, "Oh, just fine. I find around a hundred eggs every day."

After eating supper Mr. Jenkins and Fred told jokes. "Who can tell me" said Mr. Jenkins "How much dirt is there in a hole four feet square and ten feet deep in the ground?" Fred said, "There is one hundred and sixty cubic feet of dirt in the hole." "There is one hundred and fifty" said Paul. Mr. Jenkins laughed and said "There isn't any dirt if it is a hole. But if it contained dirt it couldn't be called a hole."

About nine o'clock in the evening Margaret and her husband decided to go home. They hadn't paid any attention to the weather. When they got outside the doorway, snow blew in their faces. They knew that it was dangerous going down the mountain roads so they decided to stay over night and leave early the next morning.

Next morning real early they got up and prepared to go home. When Fred went to look out of the window he couldn't see anything. He thought that the windows are frozen. He tried to open the door and it wouldn't go open. "I wonder what is holding the door shut" said Fred. Mr. Jenkins said "We will all push at once." "One, two, three, push" counted Mr. Jenkins. The door went half way open and snow fell on their heads.

Fred had left the car about one hundred feet from the house in the open. Paul climbed on top of the snow, started looking for the car. His foot hit a piece of steel which he knew was the top of the car.

The men dug a path from the house to the other buildings and also dug the snow away around the car. After eating breakfast and doing chores, they talked about what they were going to do about the car. "I don't believe the car will start, but if it does, I will buy a new one next spring," said Mr. Jenkins. Fred pulled the throttle and choak out. He then stepped on the starter. It started! They were surprised and praised the good car.

The snowplows had the mountain roads fairly well ridged of snow by the next noon. Fred and Margaret and the children ate dinner with the Jenkins and thanked them for bothering with them over Christmas.

After eating dinner they got in their "Thirty-seven Ford" and started for home. They made fair time. Just before dark they arrived home safe and sound.

SAVED BY A PAIR OF SKATES

We find the Smith family in the living room. Mrs. Smith is knitting. Mr. Smith is reading a Wild West story book, and their son, John, is shining up his skates as he says, "I don't think I will ever use these skates this winter." "But it will never hurt you one bit to shine them up," replied his mother. In a corner we find John's sister, Maggie, shining up the runners of her sled. "I am sure I will use my sled this year because it is snowing right now, and I am not worrying about doing my job for nothing," she said.

It was the next morning when John woke up and looked out of the window and was surprised to see a lot of snow on the ground. When he went down stairs to breakfast his father said, "No school today because the teacher can't get there on account of too much snow." Just as he said these words, a voice shouted out, "Oh, Goody! Goody! I can go sliding down the hill!" Of course this was Maggie and so that day John and his sister Maggie coasted down the hills all day, but John had to pull Maggie up because that was the agreement if John coasted down hill with Maggie on her sled.

So it came to be the next morning when John was awakened by his mother. His mother said "Wake up, John, and help us move some furniture and food upstairs." "Why, mother?" John asked. She replied, "It snowed so much last night that the whole down stairs walls are banked up with snow and you can't see out of them." So John got up and helped his mother move things up stairs. Maggie was carrying her sled and dolls upstairs when her mother said "These things aren't necessary." "But mother if you were a doll, you wouldn't like to be downstairs alone," she replied.

It was a few days after when the temperature went up to about sixty degrees above zero and melted all the snow, and after about two days the temperature dropped to about seven below zero and froze all the melted snow.

John's father had fallen on the ice and sprained his ankle. After a couple of days John's mother said, "We have food supply left for about one meal and then all we can do is starve to death." "Oh, no, we won't," replied John, "I will go get food supplies." "But how?" asked his mother. "With my skates," John said, "and right now."

So he got all bundled up with warm clothes and fixed a box on Maggie's sled for the food and then he put on his skates and started out. He skated over weeds, roads and just about everything because it was all ice. He returned safely with the food which would last about twelve days. After a couple of days the ice melted and the water went away with a strong wind helping to dry it up. After it was over, John said, "I guess I am the hero with my skates." "Oh, no, you aren't, my sled did most of the work," said Maggie. "All right, you win," replied John.

Orland Park, Ill.,
Dec. 15, 1936.

Dear Santa:

I want a doll and a coat. Thank you.

Barbara Jean Brickley.

We wish to remind all parents, relatives, and friends of the school that "A Christmas Carol" adapted into a play of three acts by Walter Ben Hare will be presented on Tuesday evening, December 22nd, at the Christmas party for children.

The Upper Grade pupils will carol about town on Tuesday evening, December 22, immediately preceding the play "A Christmas Carol" by Dickens, to be presented by the High School students.

The carols for the play will also be furnished by the Upper Grade Chorus. Many carols of many lands have been learned, as well as the familiar ones sung each year.

The girls in the sewing class of the Upper Grades have been making some very beautiful Christmas gifts. Most of them are of a practical nature, enhanced by many embroidery stitches.

The boys of the woodworking class have been keeping the electric saw very busy, as they prepare Christmas gifts of various shapes and uses.

"The Bird's Christmas Carol" has furnished many pleasant moments in the reading classes. Others greatly enjoyed are "Why the Chimes Rang", "Santa Claus Partner" and "Tommy Trot Visits Santa Claus."

The Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Grades will have an exchange of Christmas gifts and other fun on the afternoon of December 22.

Benefits From Forests

The benefits from forests are many. The most important are: Protection from soil erosion; retention of rainfall by the spongy layer of leaf mold on the forest floor; lessening of the occurrence of floods; purification of the air by the inhalation of carbon dioxide and exhalation of oxygen by the leaves of the trees; improvement of fishing and hunting; the profitable use of lands which are of no value except for forests.

Longest Town in America

The series of towns of Crosskeys, LaPeace and Shorter generally referred to as Shorter, Ala., constitutes the longest town in America. It is 500 yards wide and 15 miles long.

Easing the Burden of Bureaucracy

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

As every farmer, or business-man, or housewife knows, duplication of effort is one of the most deadly foes of efficiency and economy.

This is true in government, as well as on the farm, at the office or in the kitchen.

That probably explains why the nation has greeted with approval a recent promise from Washington to reorganize and curtail the confused mass of federal bureaus, boards or commissions which now sprawl over both the geographic and economic maps of America.

Expansion of the many government-supported agencies which increasingly interfere with the average citizen's life and activities is no new phenomenon of our government. It has been under way for years, regardless of which political party was in control.

Nor has it been a federal failing alone. State and local governments have succumbed to the same urge for increased authority—a trend which does much to explain our swollen public debt. Bureaucracy and High Cost of Government grow in unison.

This is by no means the first promise to the American people that Bureaucracy's costly confusion of overlapping political jobs and activities—with their enormous leakage of public funds—would be fitted into a logical and efficient pattern. America has received many earlier pledges to the same effect, while bureaus and commissions continued to multiply. But somehow those pledges failed to materialize. This time the workers and earners of America will hope the promises hold good.

They hope so for two reasons: first, because the heavy costs of Bureaucracy—however disguised—come eventually out of the workers' pockets; and, second, because Bureaucracy itself—however praised by holders of the political jobs it perpetuates—still stands as a frowning barrier across the Road to Recovery which all America is now straining to travel.

The American people didn't need a horde of Bureaucratic jobholders to help them conquer a continent. And they neither need nor seek the costly interference of so great a number in solving their problems today.

Sun Losing Mass

The sun is said to be losing mass at the rate of 360,000 million tons a day, the actual weight of the energy emitted by the sun daily.

Brought First Negro Slaves

The ship that brought the first negro slaves to North America was the Treasurer, commanded by Capt. Daniel Elfrith, which landed at Jamestown, Va., in 1619.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Land Ho!
The Changing Ocean
Safety and Speed
Much for Science

On Board Steamship Normandie.—Four nights from New York and the ship is at Southampton, The Isle of Wight is on your right. Passengers are landing for England. On your left is France, across the water. You land thereafter. On old crossings passengers watched eagerly for the first land. Now crossing and landing are about as exciting as a trip by rail from Chicago to Lake Forest, or from Wall street to Forty-second street by subway. You are in Europe before you realize that you have started. The poetry of travel has departed with fast ships on the ocean and automobiles instead of camels on the desert.

Arthur Brisbane

No matter how often you cross this Atlantic ocean, or the North American continent, the crossing is always different and interesting. The ocean, like the wide plains, is forever changing.

Two days ago the waves looked like playthings for children. Last night the ocean changed its mind and rolled the waves up high with a shrieking wind. The steward said, "We shall have to fasten the arm chairs tomorrow," but the heavy ship paid no attention to the waves. The ocean changed its mind again and calmed down.

A speedometer telling how fast the ship moves is operated by a mechanism below the keel that records the speed of the rushing water. Burning oil produces steam; steam power is converted into electric power, and that drives the ship. The captain always knows how deep the ocean is beneath him; an electric contrivance sends a sound wave down through the water to the bottom, which sends back an echo.

Knowing the speed at which sound travels through water, it is easy to calculate the depth. The machine does it for you. It is a feeble sound—one hundred and sixty thousand vibrations to the second. No human ear could pick it up, but the machine records it. Twenty-five thousand vibrations per second is the limit of your ear, and that is not bad for a primitive contrivance like a human being.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the "big" war, tells graduating students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology it is their duty to "carry science into politics." Scientists, Mr. Baker thought, must seek for "the solution of world problems when the great international crisis comes, as it surely will come."

A sufficient "great crisis" seems to be here now, with many countries wanting to fight each other, different classes already fighting each other, and in this richest country in the world—ten million human beings living practically on charity.

If that is not a real crisis, few would care to see one.

George Bernard Shaw, not yet eighty, says, "I must give up public speaking, I am too old." That surprises you from a Celt and an Irishman. At eighty many men have been vigorous in thought and body; for instance, Pope Leo, Von Moltke, Gladstone, Michelangelo.

Not one of those, however, suffered from handicaps that have aged George Bernard Shaw prematurely; he is a vegetarian and a teetotaler. Youth and strength reside in a saddle of four-year-old mutton and good, light claret, greatly diluted with water.

In spite of England's pitifully weak and belated backdown on sanctions, due to London's fear of Mussolini's air fleet; a backdown denounced as cowardice by Lloyd George, Britain, for face-saving purposes, will maintain a great fleet in the Mediterranean. Mussolini will welcome such convenient air and submarine targets near home as a sort of British hostages to fortune.

M. Auriol announces that France will not devalue the franc any further. It has already been reduced by 80 per cent, as though our dollar had been knocked down to twenty cents instead of fifty-nine cents. Prime Minister Blum knows that it does not pay to scare capital out of its wits, something that our best Washington minds have still to learn. The French workmen will have their forty-hour week and the strikes are about over. The French, a homogeneous people, realize that if they destroy France they will not have much left.

Returning to the real American interest, the defeat of Joe Louis, young gentlemen and old will observe that it is most important in all undertakings not to be afraid, worn out or cowardly. Fighters that Louis had encountered saw before them "an invincible conqueror of men."

We Must Work Together

EVERY thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks — more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our town to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers — the stores and banks of our town — and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

REPUBLICANS PLAN MILITANT ORANIZATION

Lawrenceville, Ill., Dec. 9 — The Illinois Republican State Central Committee will meet January 5, in Springfield, to mormulate a program for carrying on a militant Republican organization in this State in co-operation with the plans of the National Republican organization as recently outlined by National Chairman John Hamilton.

The meeting has been called by Perry B. McCullough, Chairman of the State Committee, whose home is in Lawrenceville and will be held at the Leland Hotel in Springfield.

The members of the State Committee will be hosts to the Republican members of the State legislature, house and senate, at a dinner following the afternoon session of the Committee. Following the dinner, the Republican members of General Assembly will caucus to select a minority leader to represent the party in the coming regular session of the legislature. This caucus is provided for in the statutes of the State.

"Since the election November 3, thousands of Republicans have written to the State Committee urging that the Republican party as the present minority party perfect its organization that it might act as a check and a balance wheel for the majority party," Chairman McCullough said in announcing the calling of the meeting.

"The members of the State Central Committee as well as Republican members of the legislature are in direct contact with the rank and file of the party, as well as the county chairman and workers, and all insist that a militant organization be carried on. It will be this backbone of the party that will furnish the plans for the program to be adopted at the coming meeting.

"Although the Democratic party won many offices at the recent election it must be remembered that hundreds of local offices were won

Around the Town

E. S. claims he isn't gonna buy any Christmas presents this year.

Our New Lenox 'Steady' list is growing and dropping off (mostly dropping off according to M. M.) She got a ring one Sunday and gave it back the next after she met W. U. — E. P., too, and we hear he is already to buy furniture.

W. S. made up with his gal and took her to the party Sat. nite. Must be swell to have a gal love you like that, W.

A. W. and H. S. disappeared from the party Saturday nite. Why the disappearing act?

Wonder what the outcome will be of the love scene played by B. Mc and J. L. in "The Dummy" being sponsored by the CYO soon.

Who are the three musketeers? J. J. W. claims they are out together every Sunday.

A certain girl wants to ask I. M. if the 'hicky' she put on his cheek still hurts, and if it made any difference between he and his gal.

D. W. is in her height of Glory when she can sit behind the wheel of a V-8 and listen to the radio while driving, only the roads between New Lenox and Wilton Center are kinda ruff according to the back seat drivers.

Who's this certain Mr. Iceberg from Ridgewood that sets B. W.'s heart all a flutter when he comes in every Sunday nite?

Who could possibly be the owner of that brand new 37-V8 that rides around New Lenox every Sunday morning?

L. C. certainly must have had an interesting time at the party, especially with all the gals' boy friends. Imagine how popular she was—five boy friends all at once; and had a happy landing too, or a soft one, anyway, didn't you L? I'll bet the boys E. N., V. A., H. W., C. V., and L. A., were surprised. Who was responsible for that jolt anyway?—Red W. sure kept his eyes open, cause he happened to be at the right places at the most interesting times. One of the readers would like to ask if W. S. and I. V. got the money collected for them?—Imagine A. W. surprise when she caught another gal flirting with her boy friend! Believe it or not but Mr. Herb' S. was one of the 'Around the Town' reporters at the party Sat. nite. He really gets around too—only why did he carry the broom stick around all nite? Surely couldn't have been afraid of his wife cause she was a game and sporty as the rest. Papa Penn certainly enjoyed the pinochle game, while it lasted. We wondered why he was so quiet, and now we know—he missed 'ma'. D. W. enjoyed the porch swing and the rope swing and as a result has a nice cold in the head. Ike and Ally, can really harmonize can't they? Might make good opera singers. E. N. claims it was awfully foggy when they left A. W. and H. S. ought to know. R. M. must have been cold, cause she watched the fire all nite. Everyone at the party agreed that 'variety was the spice of life' with the exception of the new Mrs. and she certainly has grasp the meaning of married life. The gals were wondering if she would bring her hubby to the big New Year's Eve party? E. N. says he just about had his other arm broken when L. C. took to flying the first time.

England Learns Also

Europe learns that political experiments cost money. England decided to prevent Mussolini taking Ethiopia, camping along the imperial British highway, and controlling Lake Tana, source of Nile water. The attempt failed. England backed out of that situation, hastily, after her war department had assured our so-called war department in Washington that Mussolini could not possibly conquer Ethiopia in less than three years, probably not at all.

When the dust had settled and England, with her chicken-feed assortment of 51 league nations, had apologized to Mussolini and tossed Haile Selassie into the waste-basket, England found her foreign commerce much damaged. She had missed Mussolini, and shot herself in the pocketbook.

For a little while she will copy Job: "I will lay mine hand upon my mouth. Once I have spoken . . . yea twice, but I will proceed no further."

Paris, which is France, decided to sing and dance a new car-magnole with Russian dressing; clenched fists raised in air a la Russe; red flag waving; the doleful strains of the Communist hymn, l'Internationale, and its Communist injunction, "Arise, ye prisoners of starvation," excellently sung from the Arc de Triomphe to the Place de la Bastille.

You can hardly imagine what fire, fury and enthusiasm thousands of young and old French gentlemen put into that hymn, although many of them showed few outward signs of starvation.

There were, and are, manifestations everywhere. Now in the chamber of deputies, Monsieur Gaston Gerard, practical French statesman, asks, "What has become of our foreign tourists and their spending money?"

"God the Preserver of Man" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, December 13.

The Golden Text was, "Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust" (Psalms 16:1).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "But now thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel, Fear not: for I have redeemed thee, I have called thee by thy name; thou art mine. When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. For I am the Lord thy God, the Holy One of Israel, thy Saviour" (Isaiah 43:1-3).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The divine Mind that made man maintains His own image and likeness" (p. 151).

The expression on Jane's face reflected her perplexity. "That's easy to say, doctor, but it's going to be awfully hard to do. I want to be rid of McCrossen, heaven knows—for more reasons than one. But I'll need all my courage when I try the job."

She was glad, when she got home that night, that her foreman was away; it gave her a night to think it over. In the morning he was over early with a report from the pastures and much pep in his manner.

Calmly she told him she would have to dispense with his services.

With a face as black as Gunlock Knob, McCrossen rose slowly from the chair in which he had been facing Jane.

"So you're firin' me?" Looking at her coldly and searchingly, he spoke tensely and harshly.

"I've got to cut down expenses, Dave," she said. "I—"

Before she could speak, he ran on: "Folks don't naturally fire an old hand like me, your father's friend, without giving a reason, do they? What are you turnin' me out for?"

"Dave," she said suddenly, "you've always been paid well—where does your money go? Why do you have to run steers off the ranch at night to pay your debts?"

"So," he exclaimed savagely, "a few head of steers that belonged to me by rights anyway are stickin' in your crop, eh? Do you know your own dad was the biggest cattle thief in this whole country?"

Jane stamped her foot. "It's not so!"

"Did you know he made a thief out of me? The first calves I ever stole in my life, I stole for Gus Van Tambel. Doesn't look very nice for you to talk to me about stealin' cattle," he exclaimed scornfully. "The daughter of a man that stole all he's got."

"Dave," she protested, angrily, "stop that talk. If my father owed you anything, I'll pay it."

He laughed. "All right, kiss an' make up." He stepped toward her.

She sprang to her feet. "Dave, I—"

"Why, girl, don't you know I love you?" He spoke with a queer laugh and, darting forward, caught her. While she struggled, he rained kisses on her face and neck and arms.

Jane, frantic, fought to repel him.

"Dave McCrossen, if you don't let me go, I'll scream across to the bunkhouse," she cried.

He jeered at her. "Go ahead, there's nobody there. I'll let you go after you kiss me and not before."

Just when she was afraid she would lose consciousness, the kitchen door opened behind McCrossen's back, and Quong, half hiding a long knife in his loose sleeve, burst into the room.

Jane saw the China boy first. "Kill him, Quong, kill him!" she cried, beside herself.

"Drop that knife!" thundered McCrossen. Quong, his face livid, paid no attention whatever—he meant to kill or get killed. With fresh fear seizing her, Jane jerked from the foreman's grasp and flung herself between the two men. "No, no, Quong!" she cried. "Just stand by me. Now get out of this house, Dave McCrossen. Never enter it again. Go!" she screamed.

McCrossen recovered himself. He laughed. "What's all the row about?" he demanded. "Just a little fun, Quong, that's all. The boss is tryin' to fire me, but I ain't gone yet. Get out, eh? All right, I'll get out—for now."

And laughing grotesquely, McCrossen strode to the front door, threw it open, walked out, and slammed it shut behind him.

Thoroughly shaken by the scene, Jane, without waiting for anything to eat, rode into town to seek Carpy for help.

He discounted her alarms. "No danger at all, Jane, of McCrossen's shooting Quong now. If all the threats in this country were put into action, there wouldn't be enough live men left to bury the dead men."

"Henry Sawdy will be in here for dinner. He's the man for your foreman. Talk to him after dinner."

"I'm afraid McCrossen will quarrel with whomever I put in and kill him."

"Kill Sawdy?" mused Carpy appraisingly. "Sawdy's not so fast a man as McCrossen. He's not had to shoot his way out of as many scrapes as McCrossen has; but Henry's nobody's meat to serve raw—you needn't worry about him."

"If Bill were only well," explained Jane wistfully.

"I'm glad Bill isn't," returned Carpy quickly. "I wouldn't want to see him out and in trim while McCrossen is raging around. Then you might have something to worry about. To tell you the truth, girl, I'm holding Bill Denison back right now. He's coming on fine, but let's let well enough alone. After you talk to Sawdy, you'll see Bill. For heaven's sake, don't say one word about your round-up with McCrossen. Bill would jump the hospital fence."

When she saw Denison at the hospital, it was hard for Jane to repress the excitement that the morning's struggle had left upon her.

Even without Carpy's warning, she well knew that if Denison learned what had happened he would tear loose from all restraint.

"What's the news today, dearie?" he asked.

"Why, nothing special, Bill."

"You don't act that way."

Jane laughed, evaded, and said the real news was that soon the bandages were to come off his eyes.

Sawdy accepted the ranch arrangement without a quail, though Sleepy Cat knew even before he rode out to assume his post that McCrossen was vowing vengeance.

The day after Sawdy took charge, he was in town to do some ordering. In Rubido's store he ran into McCrossen. Sawdy shook hands with him, and McCrossen told him he would be out next day to pack up his things.

"I'll be glad to see you an' help any way I can. Ought not to be no hard feelin's, Dave. What do you say to a drink?"

The two, talking things over, sauntered down the street. Sawdy halted before Spotts' place. McCrossen shook his head. "Not in there. I don't train with that butcher. Come along to the Red Front."

"No," said McCrossen, as he and Sawdy poured their glasses, "I don't carry no hard feelin's against you, Henry—not a bit. Jane treated me pretty rough, I must say that. But she ain't to blame, neither. She's been against me. It's Bill Denison that's behind all this. He's fair enough to my face, but he's double-faced."

"Dave," said Sawdy impatiently, "don't talk like a blamed fool."

McCrossen bridled. "What do you mean, Sawdy?"

"Why, everybody knows Denison ain't two-faced. A man may like Bill or not like him. He's got his enemies, I'll admit."

"You're damned right he has."

"But so's every man. Well, here's luck, Dave."

"Luck to you, Henry—not to that—"

"Cut it out, Dave. If you an' Bill can't get along, that's your business. He an' I get along fine. Well, I've got to be startin' for the ranch."

"An' for my old job! An' my old home," muttered McCrossen. "Do you blame me for bein' sore?"

"Not a bit, Dave."

"Then fill up again an' be damned to all enemies."

It was some time, however, before Sawdy could break away. Even after he left, the ex-foreman loitered at the bar, pouring his grievance into the

"I'll Let You Go After You Kiss Me and Not Before."

ears of Harry Boland, the low-voiced, mischief-making saloon keeper. "He's got my girl," complained McCrossen doggedly. "You know that, Harry."

Boland, leaning over the bar, listened sympathetically and nodded.

"It's pretty hard, Harry," McCrossen rambled on, "to stand all I've stood from that man—you know that. Little Gunlock Jane—that's what I called her first day she rode up to the ranch—that girl is the trimmest little hussy that ever crossed a horse's back in the Gunlock Hills—you know that, Harry."

"Everybody knows that," Boland nodded. "What would you do, Harry," demanded McCrossen, "if you was treated that way?"

"Well, you can't do nothin' now while Denison's in the hospital, can you? Wait till he gets out. Then tell him what you think of him."

The following day it was known up and down River street that McCrossen was spooling for a fight. McAlpin took alarm at the rumors that spread so rapidly. He ambled up the street to lay the reports before Carpy. "McAlpin," said the doctor, "don't worry. There can't be any fight as long as one man's laid up the hospital. I'm going to keep him there till McCrossen cools off."

"Why, for that boy to face McCrossen, half blind like he is now—it'd be plain murder," McAlpin burst out indignantly. "Bill Denison ought to be kept under cover for six months, Doc, till he can see straight."

Carpy refused to get excited. "See?" he echoed scornfully. "McAlpin, that boy could see right now to thread a needle in the dark. He doesn't know that. You keep your mouth shut, understand!"

As the doctor spoke, Jake Spotts stuck his head in at the office door. "Hello, Doc," he called out without any preliminary greeting. "I got a message for you from Sister Angela."

"Sister Angela!" exclaimed Carpy in surprise. "When did you see Sister Angela?"

"'Bout five minutes ago—been up to the hospital shavin' a man. Bill Denison's gone."

Carpy jumped to his feet. "What d'you mean, Jake?"

"Just what I say. That's English, ain't it? Bill Denison's gone."

"Where's he gone?"

"How the hell should I know?" demanded the friskable barber. "Nobody knows. Sister said to tell you Bill is gone."

"What—"

Spotts waved his hand. "That's all I know, and I've got to get back to the shop."

McAlpin sat with ears cocked, but had no time to speak. "Run for your life, McAlpin, and hitch up for me," exclaimed Carpy. "I'll follow you right down."

The liverman drove Dr. Carpy up to the hospital. Sister Angela in the office met the doctor. "What's this I hear, Sister?" asked Carpy. "Where's Denison?"

"He's gone. He was in his room and ate his supper at five o'clock. When the nurse went into his room again, the bed was empty. His clothes are gone from the closet. We've looked everywhere. What can we do?"

Carpy's vexed face reflected his uneasiness. "There's nothing you can do, Sister. We'll hear from him before we want to, I'm afraid." He turned from the counter and whirled around again to it. "Sister," he asked suddenly, "was there anybody here to see him this afternoon?"

"Nobody but an Indian."

"Did you get his name?"

"It was John Frying Pan."

Carpy grunted. "Thanks, Sister," he said and hurried out.

"Where now, Doc?" asked McAlpin as Carpy, silent and perplexed, got into the buggy beside him.

"Back to the office, McAlpin. The bird's flown. Hell's loose, in spite of my fine schemes."

"Did you get any explanation?"

"Plenty," rejoined Carpy grimly. "Plenty!"

CHAPTER XIV

Bill Pardaloe received the surprise of his life; it came to him that night.

Just as Pardaloe was enjoying his final smoke a gentle tapping at his window aroused him.

"Who's there?" he demanded gruffly.

"Awake, Bill!"

"Never talked in my sleep yet," retorted Pardaloe. "Who be you?"

"I'm Bill Denison."

"You're a liar—Bill Denison is laid up at the hospital. Who be you?"

"Look here, Bill, don't be a blamed fool. I'm out of the hospital and riding for Gunlock. Get up and open the door. I want to talk to you." Pardaloe grumbled a bit, and turned out. The bolts clanked, the door opened, and the ex-sheriff saw, within the rays of his dark lantern, Denison.

"So it is you, Bill. Well, I'll be darned. What's up?" he asked as he ushered his surprise caller into his bedroom. "How's your eyes?"

"First rate, Bill. I—"

"Does Carpy know you're out to-night?"

"Not yet."

"You'll ketch hell."

"Can't help it, Bill. I want to borrow your thirty-three, and I'm in an all-fired hurry."

"What do you want the rifle for, Bill?"

"I'm riding for Gunlock," repeated Denison impatiently. "I've got word a party of rustlers are going to run off some steers tonight, and I'm going to interfere."

"Who's the rustlers, Bill?" asked Pardaloe, unmoved.

"How should I know? I'm riding to find out," snapped Denison.

"Who brought the word to you?"

"John Frying Pan."

"Tain't likely McCrossen would let anybody do any stealin' he didn't get a cut in—"

"Do I get a rifle or not?" demanded Denison savagely. Pardaloe pointed. "There's the gun rack—help yourself. Who's with you?"

"Frying Pan and Bob Scott."

"They got rifles?" asked Pardaloe, rising.

"They have. Where's the ammunition?"

"Here in the drawer. I guess I'll take the old express."

"What do you mean, Bill?"

"I'm going to ride along."

"No."

"Yes."

"I say no!"

"I don't give a damn what you say. I go."

"Bill, it's not necessary. It may be close work."

"I never seen no close work yet," retorted the veteran, grimly sarcastic. "Kind of like to see what it's like!"

"Yes, but—"

"Tell John or Bob to saddle a horse for me."

"O. K.," muttered Denison, stuffing his ammunition belt rapidly with cartridges. "If you're going, you're going."

The Indians, in the saddle, were waiting outside. Scott got up a pony from the sheriff's barn for Pardaloe. Denison, on needles and pins, waited for the old man's final preparations. At last Pardaloe, considerably hurried, grabbed a hat from the rifle rack and stamped vigorously out into the night after his posse. He was the last man to mount. Denison gave the word to go, and the quartette were under way when Bill Pardaloe cried a halt.

Lesson for December 20

THE SUPREME GIFT OF LOVE
Christmas Lesson

LESSON TEXT—I John 4:7-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men. Luke 2:14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Christmas Comes.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Immanuel—God With Us.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Jesus Came to Earth.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Greatest Gift of All.

"I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old familiar carols play
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of peace on earth, good will to men."

Thus sang America's well-beloved Longfellow. But at once his honest heart began to question—"Is there peace on earth? Are not men and nations striving against each other in hatred and violence?" Were he alive today he might ask his questions with even greater fear and sadness.

How blessed then that as followers of the Christ we are again permitted to stand at the lowly manger in Bethlehem town and rejoice anew that "the Word was made flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). Let us all who bear his precious name covenant together to "keep Christ in Christmas," and in the giving of gifts remember God's great gift. Let no home fail to have read on Christmas day the Bible story of the Incarnation (Luke 2:1-20).

The lesson for this Christmas Sunday has been well chosen from the First Epistle of John. The "Apostle of Love" is our teacher as we consider God's supreme gift of love. We note first of all

I. Its Origin (I John 4:7, 8).

"God is love." In other words, love is not merely one of his characteristics, but of the very essence of his being. He not only loves, but he is love. Therefore only those who know him can truly love, and those who have not love do not know him.

II. Its Manifestation (vv. 9, 10).

"We may give without loving, but we cannot love without giving." God's love "sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him." Let us be sure to emphasize that Christmas celebrates the coming of the Saviour into the world.

III. Its Results (vv. 11-19).

1. Love between men (v. 11). This verse presents an absolutely irrefutable argument. If God could love us, surely we should love one another.

2. Fellowship with God (vv. 12-16). No man has ever seen God, but God is manifested in the lives of men who, because they have taken his Son as their Saviour (v. 14), and have confessed him as such before the world (v. 15), have come into perfect fellowship with God. Only through such lives will the world know God's love.

3. Boldness in the Lord (vv. 17, 18).

It is tragically true that even on Christmas day when we speak of peace and good will, it is a fact that men and women outside of Christ are his enemies and must look in fear toward a day of judgment. But how different for those who know Christ as Saviour. Perfect love, God's love, has cast out all fear and they may face with boldness even the day of judgment.

If any reader of these lines lacks this holy boldness, why not make this Christmas season a time of spiritual "nativity"—take the Christ of Bethlehem and Calvary as your Saviour just now!

4. Appreciation of his love (v. 19). Love begets love. God's love for us moves us deeply and we love him. He loved us "while we were yet sinners" (Rom. 5:8). Much more then, being saved, we should love him, and love the brethren. (See I John 4:20, 21.)

So "let us keep the feast, not with . . . the leaven of malice and wickedness; but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth" (I Cor. 5:8). Then we may indeed wish one another

A Joyous Christmas!

Real Poverty

Poverty is, except where there is an actual want of food and raiment, a thing much more imaginary than real. The shame of poverty—the shame of being thought poor—it is a great and fatal weakness, though arising in this country from the fashions of the times themselves.

Faith in Our Fellow Man

It is better to suffer wrong than to do it, and happier to be sometimes cheated than not to trust.—Johnson.

A Happy Man

Happy is that man whose calling is great and spirit humble.—Demosthenes.

An Object in Life

Elmer's Mother — Doctor, I suppose you will be getting a good fee for attending little James Robey—the family are so rich?
 Doctor—Why do you ask?
 Elmer's Mother — Well, I hope when you send us your next bill you'll bear in mind that it was our Elmer what throwed the brick that hit James.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Force of Habit
 Henry — What happened to you and the school teacher? You said you were going to marry her.
 Charles — Well, I got to thinking what a job it would be to write "I must be home by 10 o'clock" a hundred or so times every time I came home late.

Not Homesick
 Rastus was in the war. At every explosion he tried to get to the rear line.
 Colonel—You shouldn't be afraid, Rastus. What if you die? Heaven is your home.
 Rastus—Yes, suh, Ah knows. But Ah ain't homesick.

In pattern 5673 you will find the Block Chart, an illustration for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Household Questions

Did you ever try dipping your fresh fish in milk before rolling them in corn meal or bread crumbs preparatory to frying.

When tying children's shoes, tie string in bow first, then the loops in a single knot. They will not then easily become untied.

Ink stains may be removed from wall paper with a solution of equal parts of ammonia and hydrogen peroxide.

If chicken prepared for salad is allowed to stand in french dressing for an hour before serving, the flavor of the salad is much improved. Before adding mayonnaise at serving time, drain off french dressing.

Keep an empty snap card on hand and when taking snaps off old garments snap them on the card. This will save time looking for them when they are needed.

Cut some stale white bread in one-inch cubes, and roll them in sweetened condensed milk; then fry them in very hot, deep, clear lard for one minute, or until golden brown.

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

It may seem unreasonable, but most men cannot understand why a woman who is usually happy and loving should have recurring periods when her whole character seems changed. He cannot appreciate the distress, the discomfort that all women must endure. He does not know what it is to housework with an aching back and falling energy. All he does know is that other women seem more cheerful by comparison.
 Are you such a three-quarter wife?
 Don't let the ordeals that all women face cause you avoidable discomfort or endanger your home. Do as so many wise women have—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
 For three generations one woman has told another how to "smile through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."
 Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."
